Weaknesses

- Allows providers to care for up to four children for pay without being licensed.
- Check of fingerprints, sex offender, criminal records and child abuse registries are not explicitly included in background checks.
- Does not require providers to have completed a high school education or GED.
- Requires only 15 hours of annual training.
- Does not have requirements regarding communicating with parents, informing parents of the use of substitutes and having written policies for parents.

Strengths

- Inspects FCC providers before licensing and at least once a year.
- Licensed providers, their substitutes and assistants and family members over 12 years are required to have background checks. Exempt providers receiving subsidies are required to have background checks including child abuse and neglect registries.
- Both routine inspections/visits and those conducted when there is a complaint are unannounced.
- Providers must follow ALL 10 health requirements.
- Providers are required to have at least 40 hours of training before they can work with children.
- Regulations address ALL 10 safety requirements

Recommendations

- Begin licensing when the provider cares for one or more unrelated children.
- Use fingerprints, sex offender and child abuse registries and criminal records to conduct background checks.
- Require providers to have a high school diploma or GED and a CDA, college courses in early childhood education, or an AA degree within three years of licensing.
- Require providers to communicate with parents, inform parents when there will be a substitute provider and provide copies of written policies.
- Reduce the total number of children and the number of infants and toddlers a provider can care for at one time.
